Bill No. 21*The National Graduate Scheme Bill2018*THE NATIONAL GRADUATE SCHEME BILL*EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM*1. Policy and Principles

The object of this Bill is to establish a National Graduate Scheme and designate a Secretariat responsible for the administration of the Scheme.

Graduate skills development is very important for the production of critical skills in Uganda. It is a sound investment for the individual, the employer, and the economy. For the individual, the economic returns on this investment accrue in the form of increased earnings. For companies, the economic returns are realized through gains in productivity and profits. For an economy, the returns trickle down in the expanded output of goods and services and economic growth whose net effect is better standards of living and accessibility to services by the Community.

Technological change, higher value addition and the increased competition flowing from trade liberalization accelerate the demand for higher skills and productivity among workers. It is therefore very pertinent that Uganda as a Country devises means of developing the practical skills of the young graduates to bridge the existing gaps.

2. Defects in the Existing Legal Framework

For many of Uganda's young graduates, the transition from school to work is problematic due to the many obstacles that graduates face once they leave the safety net which University-life gives them. One of these obstacles is the challenge of a transition gap from the academic world into the labour market.

In order to address this gap, there are a number of Government and non-Government interventions in place to address skills development. These are however not premised in a legal framework and as such they are likely to be abused. These initiatives include but are not limited to;

a) Compulsory internship programmes;

Compulsory internship programmes have been introduced in most Universities in Uganda and students are placed in different organizations in which they familiarize with the practical nature of the courses they are undertaking. This, however, is not sufficient because as part of their academic learning process it is done for a short time period. There is also, no uniform standard upon which internship programmes are undertaken nor is there a follow up mechanism upon completion of internship to ensure that the programmes produce the intended results.

b) The Uganda Graduate Volunteer Scheme;

This initiative is a partnership between the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Volunteers Programme and the Government of Uganda through the Ministry of Gender, Labour and Social Development. The project is intended to provide a bridge for young Ugandan graduates as they transit from school to work by equipping them with work place skills through placements in different work spaces for a period of one year. These could be in Public, Private or Civil Society organizations. This initiative, albeit a foreign one, benefits a few graduates who voluntarily apply for it. It is donor support which now should be institutionalized within Uganda's development process, hence this proposal.

c) Graduate Trainee Programs;

Several Companies, both public and Private have undertaken graduate trainee programmes geared towards bridging the gap between University and the job market. These include the Uganda Revenue Authority, UMEME Limited, the Electricity Regulatory Authority and the Judicial Service Commission among others. This is however done on a very limited scale and very few graduates benefit from graduate trainee programs.

3. Remedies

The above background warrants the initiative to enact a law which establishes a Graduate Scheme to provide for an avenue where University graduates will acquire practical skills over and above their academic qualifications. The graduates shall be provided with practical skills through placements in different work spaces. These will include both Public and Private Organizations for a period of one year.

The main objective of this Bill is to therefore provide young graduates with employment training through work related learning and thus enhancing youth's employability and self-employment through career guidance, job placement, mentoring and connection to enterprise role models.

It is expected that the young graduates shall not only gain practical skills but also exposure while at the same time providing technical services to the communities in which they are deployed.

The Bill therefore seeks to establish a National Graduate Scheme and designate the Department Responsible for Labour in the Ministry Responsible for Labour as the Secretariat charged with the responsibility of achieving the objectives of the Scheme.
