Bill No. 24Succession (Amendment) Bill2021*THE SUCCESSION (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2021*MEMORANDUM

The Constitutional Court, in the case of Law Advocacy for Women in Uganda v Attorney General, Constitutional Petitions No. 13/05 and 05/06, declared provisions of the Succession Act relating to the distribution of estates of intestate persons unconstitutional and discriminatory against the female gender. For example the Succession Act, which was enacted in 1906, provides that a widow ceases to occupy the principal residential property when she remarries but the Act is silent on widowers who remarry. The Court ruling caused a lacuna in the law and at the moment the distribution of estates of persons who do not leave wills is not uniform, but is determined on a case by case basis at the discretion of judicial officers thus leading to uncertainty. To address the disparity, the Bill seeks to provide for the rights of women and accords women the right to equal treatment with men and provides for equality between spouses in the distribution of property.

The Succession Act, Cap.261 provides for equal distribution of estates of deceased parents amongst all the children, regardless of the age or the level of dependency on the deceased at the time of death. Increasingly, many estates have adult and minor beneficiaries who have different levels of dependency and in some instances there are children who are above 18 years but still in school. The equal distribution of the property amongst all the beneficiaries is therefore not equitable where there are adult beneficiaries on the one hand, school-going children and dependant relatives on the other hand.

The objective of the Succession (Amendment) Bill, 2021 is therefore—

- to align the Succession Act to Article 31 (Rights of the family), Article 32 (affirmative action in favour of marginalised groups) and Article 33 (Rights of women) of the Constitution of the Republic of Uganda;
- to provide for the distribution of estates of intestate deceased persons in accordance with Article 33 (Rights of women) of the Constitution of the Republic of Uganda;
- to provide for the guardianship of minor children of deceased persons;
- to provide for the discretion of courts in the grant of probate and letters of administration;
- to provide for an expiry period of two years for grants of probate and letters of administration;
- to provide for the requirement of the consent of spouses and lineal descendants prior to disposal of estate property by administrators;
- to provide for the joint administration of executors and administrators of estates; and
- to remove from the Act, all the obsolete terms used therein.

Key clauses of the Succession (Amendment) Bill, 2021

Clause 21 repeals the definitions of legitimate and illegitimate children and replaces the age of minority of twenty one years with eighteen years in accordance with the Constitution.

Clause 14 inserts a new subsection under section 27 of the Act to provide that twenty percent of a deceased's estate shall not be distributed but shall be held in trust for the education, maintenance and welfare of the minor children, children above eighteen years of age but below twenty five years of age, if at the time of the death of the intestate, these children were undertaking studies and were not married, children with disabilities who are above eighteen years of age, if at the time of the death of the intestate, these children were not married and were wholly dependent on the intestate for their livelihood.

Clauses 18, 19 and 20 repeal sections 31, 34 and 35 of the Act, which are obsolete.

Clause 21 upholds Article 32 of the Constitution (affirmative action) by allowing married women to dispose of any property which they would be entitled to dispose of during their life or which they are entitled to under a will. The clause also repeals the phrases “is deaf or dumb or blind”, “is ordinarily insane” and “is of sound mind” and replaces them with more suitable terms.

Clause 22 makes it compulsory for testators to provide for their spouses, lineal descendants and dependant relatives in their wills.

Clause 24 provides that either parent of a minor may, by will, appoint a guardian for the minor.

Clause 25 lists the persons who qualify to be guardians. These include the surviving parent, except where there is a court order to the contrary, a person appointed as such by the surviving parent where the surviving parent is not willing or able to act as the guardian and a person appointed jointly by the brothers and sisters of both the deceased and the surviving parent.

Clause 31 makes an addition to the legal requirements of making a will that is valid in law. The clause makes it a requirement for each of the witnesses to write his or her name and address on every page of the will, in the presence of the testator.

Clause 32 seeks to amend the Act to provide that where a will is hand written or produced in a typed format by a person other than the testator, on the instructions of the testator, and that person who writes or produces the will has a benefit given by the will, either by way of bequest or by way of appointment, the bequest or appointment shall be void, so far as concerns the person who wrote or produced the will, or the spouse of that person or any other person who would claim under that person or under the spouse of that person.

Clause 37 provides that where a testator who is survived by minor children does not expressly appoint an executor or executrix but appoints a guardian for the minor children, the guardian shall act as the executor or executrix.

Clause 38 grants the courts discretion to determine whether a person who is otherwise qualified to be granted probate, is fit and proper and allows a court to defer the appointment of an executor or executrix to a later date or to refuse to grant probate where an applicant is not suitable.

Clauses 39 and 41 create offences where executors, executrices or administrators who, before the grant of probate, misapply the estates of the deceased, or subject the estates to loss or damage and provide penalties for the offences.

Clauses 46 and 47, respectively, substitute sections 215 and repeal section 216 which provide for administration of estates by minors.

Clauses 52 and 53 amend sections 258 and 259 to provide for a period of validity of probate and letters of administration of two years from the date of issue, which period may be extended as the court may determine.

Clause 56 provides that executors, executrices or administrators may, only dispose of estate property with the consent of the spouses and the lineal descendants of the deceased persons, and that where the beneficiaries are minors, the guardians of the minors shall give consent and that where the guardians are the executors, executrices or administrators, the court shall give the authorisation to dispose of the property.

Clause 58 provides that where there are several executors, executrices or administrators, the powers of the executors, executrices or administrators, shall be exercised jointly and that all the executors, executrices or administrators, shall sign all the documents necessary for the administration of the estate.

Clauses 64, 65 and 67 create offences where a person misapplies the estate of the deceased, or subjects an estate to loss or damage or causes a loss to an estate by neglecting to get any part of the property of the deceased or wilfully and without reasonable excuse omits to surrender the probate or letters of administration when requested to do so, and provide penalties for the offences.

Clause 68 deletes the words “district delegate” and “lunatic” because they are obsolete.

KIRYOWA KIWANUKA,
Attorney General.
